

Ordinary Priced Houses and Lots Going With Tolerable Regularity.
Only One Large Sale Recorded.

"My heart has actually sick," said a prominent real estate dealer in the building and selling line the other day. "to think of the competition in my line which makes it go so hard with the man who puts all he has and all he can borrow into a house and let with the expectation of making a big profit on his sale. I have had houses for sale on the same street with others of the same class and size at prices that I thought were good, and I could undersell the man who had but one house by $500 and upwards every time. I buy my lumber, hardware, bricks and all cheaper in large quantities and on better terms. My ground costs me less and I pay less interest every way. I must undersell my neighbor and push my business to make it a success. He must come to rank with me in respect to skill. His chance for selling are much less than mine for I advertise all the time. He struggles along with his mortgage and interest and finally is glad to sell at little if any advance on my prices. So you see the real estate business is like all other businesses where there is a lot of competition. It's the little ones right along. It's much the same with the small dealer who sells or rents on commission. Unless he does a good sized business he generally more than earns the commission in time spent, shoes leather worn out and breath wasted, hours being out of his own private capital back him and it's up hill work with most of them."

Country Property Moving

According to the recorded transfers of property of last week the sales of country real estate were not so far behind those in the city, with the exception of one or two heavy transfers. Dealers say there is considerable inquiry and investigation of titles going on, but the results in closed up deals make a rather slight showing the past fortnight. The largest sale of business property lately was that of the three-story Cody block at the northwest corner of Pearl and Campus streets by D. D. Cody and partners to David M. Amberg, of the firm of Hart & Amberg, which occupies the ground floor.

Other principal sales were a piece of the Johnson property at Hall and South Division streets, sold by Guy Johnson to Mary N. Parra for $5,200; two lots of North Division street, between Lyons and Chicago streets, owned by John John Newberg to George W. Nichols for $3,500; seven lots on Cottage Grove and Oakdale avenues in the south end, traded by Peter Hailey to Charles R. Smith for $3,600; a house and lot on Courtney street in the north end, owned by George H. Smith to Henry W. Cummings, $1,500; house and lot on Sixth street, west side, Aaron O. Benaway to Johannes Hagerty, $1,000; three lots between Walker and Alexander avenues, Pitt H. Mosher to Cornelius F. Rakely, $1,700; a fine vacant lot, situated on the corner of Third and Adams streets near Cort avenue, sold by James Hill of Alpine to John A. Muehling, $2,000; house and lot on Peck & Venable's addition adjoining Kalamazoo avenue, sold by George H. Corbin to Albert J. Lewis for $2,000, and later to Amy and Emma E. Swartz for $2,500; house and lot on Cass street, between Adams and Henry streets, near to John M. Sadler, $1,000; three lots in the northwest district, near Alpine avenue, Paul V. Finch to John E. Keeney, $1,200; five lots at South Division street and Griggs' avenue, Waite E. Moore to Norman L. and J. C. Jones, $2,900; a lot on Bickley street purchased by W. F. McKnight from C. W. Tufts, $1,100.

OVER MOUNTAIN TOPS.
A Moonshiner Beats All Records in Trying to Make Revenue Officers.

There is a case that went to record on the docket of the United States court at Atlanta, Ga., a few days ago, which for genuine grit and indomitable energy outstrips anything to be found in the pages of Longstreet's fustian book. The man who breaks the record is Albert Oliver, a plain, every moonshiner.

It seems that Oliver was making good deal of whisky without the proving eye of the law peeping into stillhouse. But the deputies got w of his method and determined to root him out. Accordingly, they came night or two ago, two deputies, Star-and Dickey, left Atlanta and went Blue Ridge, far up into the very heart of the mountains of north Georgia. They had been riding about an hour over the mountain sides when it came upon Oliver walking along the road carrying a lantern. He was loved to pass, and the officers rode suspecting him, and determined to root his distillery and raid it before crack of day.

Did they do it? Well, hardly.

It was ten miles to Oliver's distillery. The road was rough and rocky. More than this, it was as dark as Egypt. Oliver said to himself: "These revenue inspectors, and I'll see one better before they shall get my pot." The echo of the horses' hoofs did not die away upon his ears before his mind was made up to beat those officers on a flank march and halt all apparatus moved away to his home, separate himself with a pistol and wait back to welcome the officers. He all this long before daybreak and before the officers, who declared they traveled with their horses hot as spur and whip, approached his places. There they found Oliver cool with dirt and dust, his clothes dripping with foaming perspiration. He pasted like a stone or lived like a house. He had made his trip, run miles over mountain tops, waded creeks and branches and taken away his tillery, but the officers caught him last, stealing in their footsteps, haps with murderous intentions, threw his pistol on the ground before him and gave himself up.

INATTENTIVE HOUSE MEMBERS.
A New York Congressman Thinks Writing Books Should Be Taken Away.

"There is but one way in which can be made a more attentive body," says a member from New York Washington Post reporter as he peeped the house and heard one speaking while one hundred and sixteen others chewed gum or rustled papers, "and that way is to take from members their desks. They should given no opportunity to write a legislative business is on tap. If plumes straight, hard benches with a pen to do more or less, and a house more of what is going on. Long ago the English realized this. In the house of commons there is a disturbance of any kind unless an extremely heated and factional debate on. Everybody in the chamber is what the man who has the chair is saying. If the mother writes read the newspaper of a year this lead to be many many ago they go into a room provide that purpose. I am not much of Anglomaniac myself. In fact, I think that cockney immigration ought to be permanently barred. But there things other than women that might copy from England and to a lag the worse for it.

A WOMAN WARRIOR.

Black Snell, Who Fought Like a Man in His Own Country.

There have been many women warriors in the world, but the Philadelphia Inquirer thinks it must be admitted that there have been very few who deserve such as to claim the nation of the country for any great length of time. In the annals of woman's lore there are generally stories of malcontents, leading to fanatical and subsequent punishment and disgrace.

HANNAH SNELL (1840).

Seldom, indeed, has a woman been so gratefully recognized by the erement of her country. Within memory of our grandparents there in England a woman named Ha Snell, who, when but a girl, took strange resolution of enlisting as a soldier. She served as a marine on one of the vessels of a fleet bound for the Indies, and showed so much courage that she was repeatedly promoted. Her sex was unknown, and therefore could never be claimed that Ha Snell's success was due to partial favoritism. One day, when dangerously wounded, she extracted the ball he feared that she might be discovered and discharged. After long service returned to her native home at Waver, England, where her adventures soon became spread around. The erement, on investigation of her great career, granted her a pension of twenty pounds. She died full of age and laden with honors at an inn at Wapping.

Worse Than Chicago.

Two little Newark (N. J.) boys, about six and seven years, while sitting to cross a street in that city one last week, got stuck in the mud when they tried to rescue themselves from this strange predicament. A few minutes they kept quiet, but they realized their position they cried for help. A laborer heard their cries, and, coming to their assistance, rescued them from their unpleasant predicament.

Tragic Chance Shot.

An illicit distiller named Charles roll, of Buchanan county, Va., was sued by revenue officers and took refuge in a vacant barn. The officers had ideas that he was concealed therein as they came to visit of him. One laid a wager that he could put a bullet through a knothole in the door. The fired, and a groan followed the report. Carroll had his eye at the hole and perceived his death wound.

TIRE D HUMANITY.

Extract From a Lecture Delivered at the Surgical Hotel, Columbus, Ohio.

The physician who fails to recognize the wonderful influence that springs up upon disease and health will find to a large extent, in the practice of medicine. The most pronounced type of disease is modified by it, and the most robust health is disturbed by it. In April and May, the peculiar epidemic afflicts the atmosphere in such the sick and well, weak and strong its effect. The one word which describes this feeling better than any other in English language is "Tired." Strength may not be much impaired, appetite may not be greatly gone, yet a vague complaint is heard morning and night, "How tired I feel!" Sleep does not seem to refresh nor food strength. Tired, tired, tired! One it on every hand. The bookkeeper rily feels an equal column of figures in his brain and tired nerves. The faithful housewife drags herself through daily routine of her duties, tired beginning, still more at the end. Everything seems to tire everybody. No seems to rest anybody. The patient complains of aches and pains, and takes up the universal plaint of "How tired I am!"

The robust man, in the prime of age and health, finds himself unable to tire, shake off that tired feeling. This complaint increases in severity and universality as civilization increases. It has become as prevalent in North, South, East and West that it would be difficult to imagine what masses of the people would do without it. This complaint increases in severity and introduction of this medicine the most timely and fortunate evidence that ever occurred in the history of medicine. Surely no greater one existed than the want of some refreshing medicine, such sufficient in its action and cleansing power to remove that tired feeling.

It is just as certain that Peppermint this want completely, and fails to produce the desired effect. who are victims of chronic catarrhs, suffering from the effects of grippa will find this remedy especially to their need.

For a complete lecture on this subject send for a copy of The Family Physician, No. 3, which will be sent free of charge by the Peppermint Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

great confidence in its curative powers, and have shown that there is preparation that can be depended upon for their painful and aggraving rheumatism. J. M. McMane writes:
"Mr. Moses Price of this place troubled with rheumatism for time. Chamberlain's Pain Balm cured him. He says that the Balm is equal." For sale by E. J. Wurzburg, druggist, No. 58 Monroe street.

My wife was confined to her room two months with a very severe attack of rheumatism. We could do nothing that would afford her relief, until we used Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. To our surprise she began to improve after first application, and by using it regularly she was soon able to go about her usual household work. E. J. Wurzburg,
druggist, No. 58 Monroe street.

Elder S. S. Beaver of McAllister, Juniper county, Pennsylvania, writes:
"The summer she tramped through Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea for for it, and was much pleased with speedy relief it afforded. She has used it since, and never again experienced what it never fails. For sale by Wurzburg, druggist, No. 58 Monrostreet."

Physicians Outdone.

My wife has been suffering with male trouble of the severest kind over three years. I have paid $250 in the last three months and have no relief. She had doctored often with the best of physicians.

I bought three bottles each of Dullman's Great German Female
Tonic and Dullman's Great German Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney and can say today that she is now cured! W. H. Davis,
